

ABSTRACT

- A display system comprises a light modulator having at least three linear arrays of light modulating devices on a common substrate, at least one light source producing at least three colors of light for illuminating the at least three linear arrays, a lens for creating line images of the at least three linear arrays on a display surface, and a scanning mirror for scanning the line images to create a two-dimensional image on the display surface.
- 5